

The deadline of June 2 needs to be extended. Simply put, there is no rush on making the changes suggested, but undoing them would be nigh-impossible.

Consolidation has already adversely affected the quality of content of broadcast, radio, and newspaper output.

We have already seen preventable deaths occur due to lack of local news coverage in the past year.

More public comment is essential to balance public interest (the owners of the leased airwaves) with corporate bottom lines.

The sheer fact that I have heard nothing from the major media outlets about the option to publicly comment is proof in and of itself that multiple voices need to be heard.
